About the author:

Tan Yung Ming is a medical officer who is still labouring away in various restructured hospitals, with the hope to do Family Medicine one day to promote preventive medicine and healthy family lives. In his free time, he indulges in his other passions – running an internet forum club for doctors at www.SGDR.com and playing music on his guitar to a captive audience of three cats belonging to his next door neighbour.

i'm in pain, doc. there came a cry so help me now or let me die.

the man in white took a quick look and saw how the poor woman shook.

with haste he stopped to quickly prescribe a drug to ease her body's plight.

*hurrying off after a while,
without a caring word or sincere smile,*

or a tender touch to show loving care which could easily dispel spirit's despair.
